JUSTIFICATION: Based on snorkel survey expansions, in years when concurrent weir counts were available, overall production of steelhead in Peterson Creek has declined in recent years. For the last 7 years (2015-2021), snorkel survey index counts conducted each spring have been below the 1997-2014 average of 28 fish (equivalent to 116 fish), when steelhead abundance in the creek appeared to be relatively stable. In 2018, 2019, 2020, and 2021 the snorkel survey counts were 6, 3, 11, and 24 fish, respectively. The 2019 count of 3 fish was the lowest count since surveys began in 1997. Continued low escapements require this closure to conserve the Peterson Creek steelhead stock.
